SHORT DESCRIPTION

This European Environment Agency report emphasizes the value of public involvement in environmental policy. Through case studies and best practices, it highlights transparency, co-creation, and inclusive governance as key to people-centered environmental strategies.

SUGGESTIONS

Organize discussion groups or classroom debates where participants explore the case studies and best practices from the report. These sessions can encourage critical thinking by asking students to evaluate the outcomes of different approaches, compare strategies across contexts, and reflect on how public participation shapes policy success. Educators can assign roles, such as policymakers, community members, or environmental experts, to simulate real-life decision-making and deepen engagement with the material.
